

Privacy statement

In line with the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR), every organisation that saves personal data has to explain what it does with those data in a privacy statement. This is the privacy statement of History Health & Healing (HHH).

1 HHH collects the following data from its members:

- Name
- E-mail address
- Affiliation / specialism / expertise (not required)

These data are collected in order to send the members newsletters, inform them about activities, and understand the interests and expertise of the members.

2 The list of members with these data is only accessible to staff members of HHH, such as the secretary of the board and the webmaster. We do not give any of these data to others, unless the person whom it concerns has given explicit permission to do so on each separate occasion.

3 We aim to include a public list of members on the HHH website, but we will only put those members on that list who have explicitly given their permission to publish their names and interests and/or affiliation and/or specialisms on the HHH website. The idea behind this is that members and others interested in medical humanities can get in touch with each other when they are looking for someone with a shared interest or an expertise they need.

4 The carriers of the data (e.g. laptop) are well protected with anti virus software and a safe password. The same goes for the e-mail addresses that are used by HHH staff members. This is the responsibility of the owner of the computer and the staff members concerned.

In case of a data leak (e.g. a hacked computer) we are obliged to inform the Dutch Data Protection Authority (Dutch DPA).

5 We save the data as long as a person is a member of HHH. When a member lets HHH know by e-mail that they no longer want to be a member of HHH, we delete all data of the member.

6 All members of HHH are welcome to inspect the data collected on their person by HHH. At a member's request, their data will be deleted. In order to stay a member of HHH, HHH needs at least a name and an e-mail address.

7 All members of HHH must give explicit permission to HHH to collect their data by e-mail. HHH will send them a request to this end.
